Tacoma To Face Bellevue Quintet; Game Scheduled for 7 p.m., at GRCC

By Walt Snover

Tacoma Community College will compete in its first state basketball tournament Thursday night as the Titans face the champions of the Eastern Division, Bellevue, in a 7 p.m. contest in the Green River Gym.

The eight team double-elimination tournament will put the cap on the season for Coach Don Moseid's fourth place team, which has been rated as an underdog all season. The Titans, however, rallied for a very respectable winning season and a 11-7 league mark.

The tournament will last through Saturday night with two sessions each day, one in the afternoon starting at 2 p.m. and one in the evening beginning at 7 p.m. Each session will consist of two games, with the two teams which are undefeated by Saturday playing for the championship at 9 p.m.

Competing from the Eastern Division will be the top four teams, Bellevue, Everett, Yakima, and Spokane, while Clarke, Green River, Highline and Tacoma will represent the Western Division.

"Bellevue has to rate as a top notch ball club," said Moseid, "We'll have to play a good ball game all around, but I feel the boys will do a great job."

Moseid concluded, "The team has shown vast improvement over the season and the boys will be in their fighting on Thursday."

TCC lost two games earlier this season to Bellevue. In their first encounter Bellevue outlasted the Titans for a 76-54 win, while the second game found TCC on the short end of a 74-69 score.

Moseid will start his regular five with Don Martonik and Tom Patnode at guards, Don Lehman and Marty Morin at the forwards and Greg Freitag holding down the center spot.

Spearheading the Bellevue attack will be Lee Edmonds, a flashy forward from Washington

How to Get to Green River?

For those perplexed individuals who can't find their way to the state tournament:

Take Interstate 5 north until you reach the Auburn cutoff and then precede on through and past Auburn. Approximately two miles out of Auburn on the right there is a sign reading "Green River Community College." The sign points left and you then follow the signs to the college.

D.C. Also starting for Coach Bob Woods will be guards Kirk Kilgour, and Cliff Kendricks, forward Jeff Hill and center Bill Gordon.

Admission prices for each session will be $1 to students with activity cards and $1.50 without.

Game Schedules:

Thursday

Game 1-2 p.m. Highline vs. Spokane
Game 2-4 p.m. Green River vs. Everett

Game 3-7 p.m. Bellevue vs. Tacoma
Game 4-9 p.m. Yakima vs. Clark

Communists to the right of us, Communists to the left of us, Commies in the White House, Commies in the Courthouse and Commies in the little "Red" Schoolhouse. This has been the hard line drivel of those so-called super-patriots of Motherhood, God and Apple Pie.

The John Birch Society was founded by Robert Welch, candy manufacturer (Sugar Daddys) of Massachusetts. His ideas are stated in a book entitled the Bluebook. In the Bluebook, Welch states the basic theme of the John Birch Society that America is in the grips of the "Communist Conspiracy." The Birch Society's line-up of announced Communist agents are Dwight Eisenhower, Chief Justice Earl Warren and the manufacturers of fluoride toothpaste to name just a few.

The appeals made to the public oddly enough parallel those used by the Communist Party. Their appeals to fear and emotion gains public support through their use of high sounding slogans. The Birchers rally support by forming committees such as the "Support Your Local Police Committee," "Citizens for the Support of Law and Order Committee," and the "Yours for less Government and a Better World Committee." These committees utilize "front" names which appear to be quite respectable, but the committees are not used, or example, to support the local police. They are recruiting and indoctrinating organizations.

Because the Birchers are obsessed with the fear of Communism they lack a sense of balance in determining the correct proportions of the Communist threat. This radical attitude is unhealthy and counter-productive to their ultimate goal of containing the "Communist Conspiracy."

Playboy Philosophy To Be Discussed In No-Credit, No-Test Class

By Bonnie Taylor
Playboy, one of the most controversial magazines to be published in many years, will come under scrutiny at Tacoma Community College spring quarter when Mr. Luther Jansen of the sociology department begins his night school class in the philosophy of Hugh Hefner, Playboy's editor.

"The question that will be discussed is not 'What the philosophy of Hugh Hefner is,' but 'Is there a philosophy involved?'" said Jansen. "Attitudes and ideas that motivate and guide the editorial policy of the magazine will be discussed," Pansen said.

Basic materials to be used will be reprints from four editorials written over a period of two years by Mr. Hefner. These will be examined carefully. An attempt will be made to justify the material, including a commentary on certain aspects of social change in our present society, continued Jansen.

The Community Services Program, under whose auspices the course will be presented, attempts to bring to the TCC campus on the current issues about which people are concerned. The course will cover such concerns as "The New Morality" and the concept of Joseph Fletcher in his book, Situation Ethics.

Also to be examined will be the validity of the criteria of some of the traditional ideas of our society with emphasis on the validity of some of its laws. For example: the absurdity of laws dealing with sexual behavior, and the critical attitude of society on departures from what it considers the "norm."

The class will begin the week of March 26 in Building 15. It will be a ten-week, non-credit offering. Cost will be $10.

Honorary Club To Meet at Noon; Tutors Students

Delta Pi Lambda, Tacoma Community College's honorary organization, encourages students with a 3.0 cumulative GPA or better to become active members. Students should be currently enrolled with 12 or more credit hours.

Delta Pi Lambda meets at noon in Building 7-5 on the first and third Wednesdays of each month.

Members tutor TCC students as part of their activities. The tutorial center, where any student may sign up for scholastic help in most subject areas, is located in Bldg. 18-6. A student may arrange for a single session or more if necessary.

TCC Projects to Begin

'Phase 3' Ends Last of April; Natural Effect To Be Created

Frank Mitchell, supervisor of building and grounds for Tacoma Community College, announced plans for "Phase 3" of the landscaping and beautification of the campus.

Phase 3 includes the seeding and planting of all the upper area. Mitchell said the money has been appropriated and a tentative plan has been accepted by the Board of Trustees.

Many Trees

The planting of the northern end of the campus is to include pine, birch and maple trees surrounded by gravel. Other parts planned to have grass with gravel are paths through them. A sprinkler system will also be installed to maintain the beauty of the landscaping.

The desired effect of the beautification is modern, in keeping with the style of architecture of the school, but Mitchell said, "We hope to keep a natural effect also."

"We hope to have the entire project completed by the end of April," Mitchell also stated.

The end result of the project will be a better drainage system and an end to the many puddles on campus.

Student Participation

Mitchell said there are certain areas that are not included in the present plans. They are the two courts at the Art and Music Building, the court at the new Student Union Building and the front of Building 7. He commented that perhaps the students would like to participate in their planning.

Some buildings on lower campus are not complete with regards to landscaping, but at a later time, these will be planted.

By the end of April the TCC campus will be a more beautiful place for its students.

Arboretum Requested By TCC; Will Benefit Entire Campus

Carol Brockway

Dr. Thornton M. Ford, president of Tacoma Community College, recently announced future plans for an arboretum for the TCC campus.

In a letter to Dr. Ford from the Capitol District of the Washington Federation of Garden Clubs, Civic Projects Chairman Mrs. Mark Titlow, said:

"We are interested in the development of an arboretum on the campus of the college similar to the one at the University of Washington."

The funds for the project would be supplied by the garden clubs on a continuing yearly basis, the letter said.

Dr. Ford stated that a possible location for the arboretum would be on Pearl Street between 12th and 19th Streets. There is also a chance of the arboretum being incorporated with a 10-acre playground-park planned by the Metropolitan Park District.

"The arboretum will be a valuable resource to our science students and is another move to make the college a center of interest for the entire community," Dr. Ford said.

Dr. Ford told the Campus Development Committee of the plans. The committee endorsed the plans unanimously. He then took the recommendation to the Board of Trustees Feb. 1 where they accepted the plans also.

In the letter, Mrs. Titlow said, "It would seem worthwhile to develop an over-all plan; then various portions could be worked as time and funds permit."

Dr. Ford summarized the project as a "great opportunity for the campus."

ART AND LITERARY SUPPLEMENT

Book Review:

Giacomo Joyce

By James Joyce

James Joyce: Giacomo Joyce

Members of the ever-growing Joycean fraternity have waited impatiently for the publication of this manuscript since portions of it were revealed in Richard Ellman's biography of Joyce some time ago.

Giacomo was written as Joyce was nearing the completion of Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man during the period when he lived and taught English in Trieste. It is a mere thread when compared against the vast fabric of his later works, Ulysses and Finnegans Wake, and would constitute less than a chapter in the smaller Portrait. Yet, to anyone with a serious interest in Joyce (and this type of person seems to be the only type who reads him), Giacomo provides a refreshing viewpoint. Heretofore, Joyce has been only seen through the meshes of his work, the eyes of his critics and biographers, and the written predilections of his brother and acquaintances.

Giacomo is a delicate portrait of his attraction to the dark young Triestine woman with whom he became infatuated while tutoring her in English. Since Joyce decided not to publish the work, it is presented as he wrote it, and in it is the only example of Joyce's artistic effort which allows an honest look into the man himself.

Why Joyce did not have this work published is a question which will blow in the wind. All who have read the final chapters in Portrait, and those few who have attempted Ulysses and Finnegans Wake have met the shadow of Joyce's young lady in Stephan Dedalus' visions of women, Molly Bloom in Ulysses and Anna Livia in Finnegans Wake. That this manuscript was used piecemeal throughout his work is clear to any who reads Giacomo.

The book, published Jan. 1, 1968, carries an introduction by Richard Ellman and photo reproductions of the original manuscript in Joyce's handwriting, as well as the printed text itself.

The following is a portion of the book:

She raised her arms in an effort to hook at the nape of her neck a gown of black veiling. She cannot: no, she cannot. She moves backwards toward me mutely. I raise my arms to help her: her arms fall. I hold the websoft edges of her gown and drawing them out to hook them I see through the opening of the black veil her lithe body sheathed in an orange shift.

Although small, the book will make a proud addition to all Joycean collections.

BALLAD OF THE EMPTY COFFEE MACHINES

By Bonnie Taylor

These are the times that try men's souls.

In the course of our city's history, the students of Tacoma have rallied bravely

Whenever the rights of men have been threatened.

Today a new crisis has arisen: Tacoma Community College, better known as TCC,

Is attempting to operate without one essential item—

Someone to fill the shiny coffee machines!

Students! Hear me out!

This could happen to you!

Well, let me tell you the story about a student who I knew one tragic and fateful day.

He put ten cents in his pocket, left his classroom at the break, Said, "I'll return when the coffee is done!"

Well, did he ever return?

No, he never returned

And his fate is still unlearned

He could be waiting forever by that empty machine,

That student who never returned.

TO VISIT THE QUEEN

By Larry A. Greenwood

I love to think. I try to spend as much of my day as I possibly can doing all the thinking I'm able. Thoughts are wonderful things. They can be as gigantic or tiny as I want, and I can go anyplace or do anything I want. Today, I picked out a blade of grass a safe distance from a sidewalk and crawled inside to watch the people go by completely unaware I was there and watching. Some walked slow. A crippled girl walked so slow, I had enough time to cry myself to sleep before she had inched out of sight. I know, 'cause I was there and I saw her and I loved her.

Last week, I picked out the most important person in the whole world (I know he is cause he's told me several times) and I got inside a rising toy balloon to observe his greatness from a different angle. It's true what they say about distance, you know, that distance makes everything seem less important, cause as I watched the earth and the most important man on it, get smaller and smaller, I couldn't remember what I was going to watch. Can you imagine forgetting someone like him? Sometimes I think I'm slipping. I don't like to think of the time I was a military cannon. They wouldn't let me think. I couldn't turn around. They told me when to speak and what to eat and who to kill. That's when I found out there's no room for hate when you're full of fear.

Once I was the blue sky and I loved it best I guess, cause even though most people didn't notice I was there, some stopped and, looked at me and smiled, and I smiled in return and the sun was warm on my back. It was good that time.

My thoughts and I don't leave 'cause I dislike anyone; as a matter of fact, sometimes it gets lonely while I'm away, I'll take you if you want. But you've got to hang on to me tight or you'll get lost. (I know, 'cause I am.)

If I ever get my thinking down good enough, I'm going to creep inside myself and look around. I tried once, but I wouldn't let me in. I wonder what I'm hiding from myself. After I've gone in and looked around, I'll tell you all about it sometime (if I get out alive).

Life

Stop for a moment and take a look at it.
