Science Complex Dedicated

Robert Yamashita, chairman of the TCC Board of Trustees, unfurled a scroll and read: "... We dedicate this building to students, present and future, that they may use the knowledge they gain here to shape a better tomorrow." The occasion was the dedication of TCC's newly expanded science complex Dec. 8. Thomas A. Swayze, Speaker of the State House of Representatives, State Sen. Booth Gardner and Tacoma Mayor Gordon Johnston took part in the ceremonies marking completion of the $497,000 expansion and remodeling. Snow in the morning and rain driven by 40-m.p.h. winds in the evening kept attendance down, leading one science faculty member to quip: "We didn't have a dedication; we had a baptism." Even so, about 40 persons turned out to hear Jack H. Hyde, TCC geology instructor, lecture on Mount St. Helens and other Washington volcanos.

Explore Inner and Outer Space

The 54 non-credit community service classes that TCC will offer during the winter quarter range from Outer Space (George Harper's astronomy class, offered Tuesday evenings) to Inner Space (meditation, transactional analysis, self-realization). Whether your interest runs to art, music, dance, social issues, literature or making money through investments, there's a course to suit your fancy. Classes begin the week of Jan. 17, and registration is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and from 6 to 8 p.m. Jan. 10-14 in Bldg. 6.

People in the News:

Mrs. Carole H. (Wines) Steadman, study skills and reading instructor at TCC, is co-author of a new social science textbook, Man's Search for Himself. The book combines content with a built-in reading program... Richard J. Deyoe, counselor and student activities adviser at TCC, has been selected by the Association of College Unions-International as Two-year College Committee coordinator for its Region 14, which includes the Pacific Northwest, Alaska and Japan.
